

Remote Working in Alicante city

Alicante
City & Beach

A FIRST APPROACH TO ALICANTE

- Located on the east coast of Spain, it is the second largest city in the Valencia Region. The province of Alicante is the fifth largest in Spain in population.
- Alicante is the capital of the Costa Blanca, where we find other popular destinations such as Denia, Benidorm, Torrevieja and Elche.
- It is a medium-size cosmopolitan city, with around 345.000 inhabitants, and it overlooks the Mediterranean Sea. Around 12% of the city's population is foreign.
- It is an important university city and also the chosen location for the head office of the European Union Intellectual Property Office (EUIPO).

TRANSPORT

Alicante's complete transport network includes the Alicante-Elche International Airport, with connections from many Spanish and European cities. It is the fifth most important airport in the country and it offers domestic and international flights to over 120 airports.

Regular direct flights to and from airports in major European cities ensure convenient, easy access to Alicante from many countries such as the UK, France, Germany, the Netherlands, Portugal, Belgium, Italy, Finland, Sweden, Norway and many others.

It is connected with the city centre by bus.

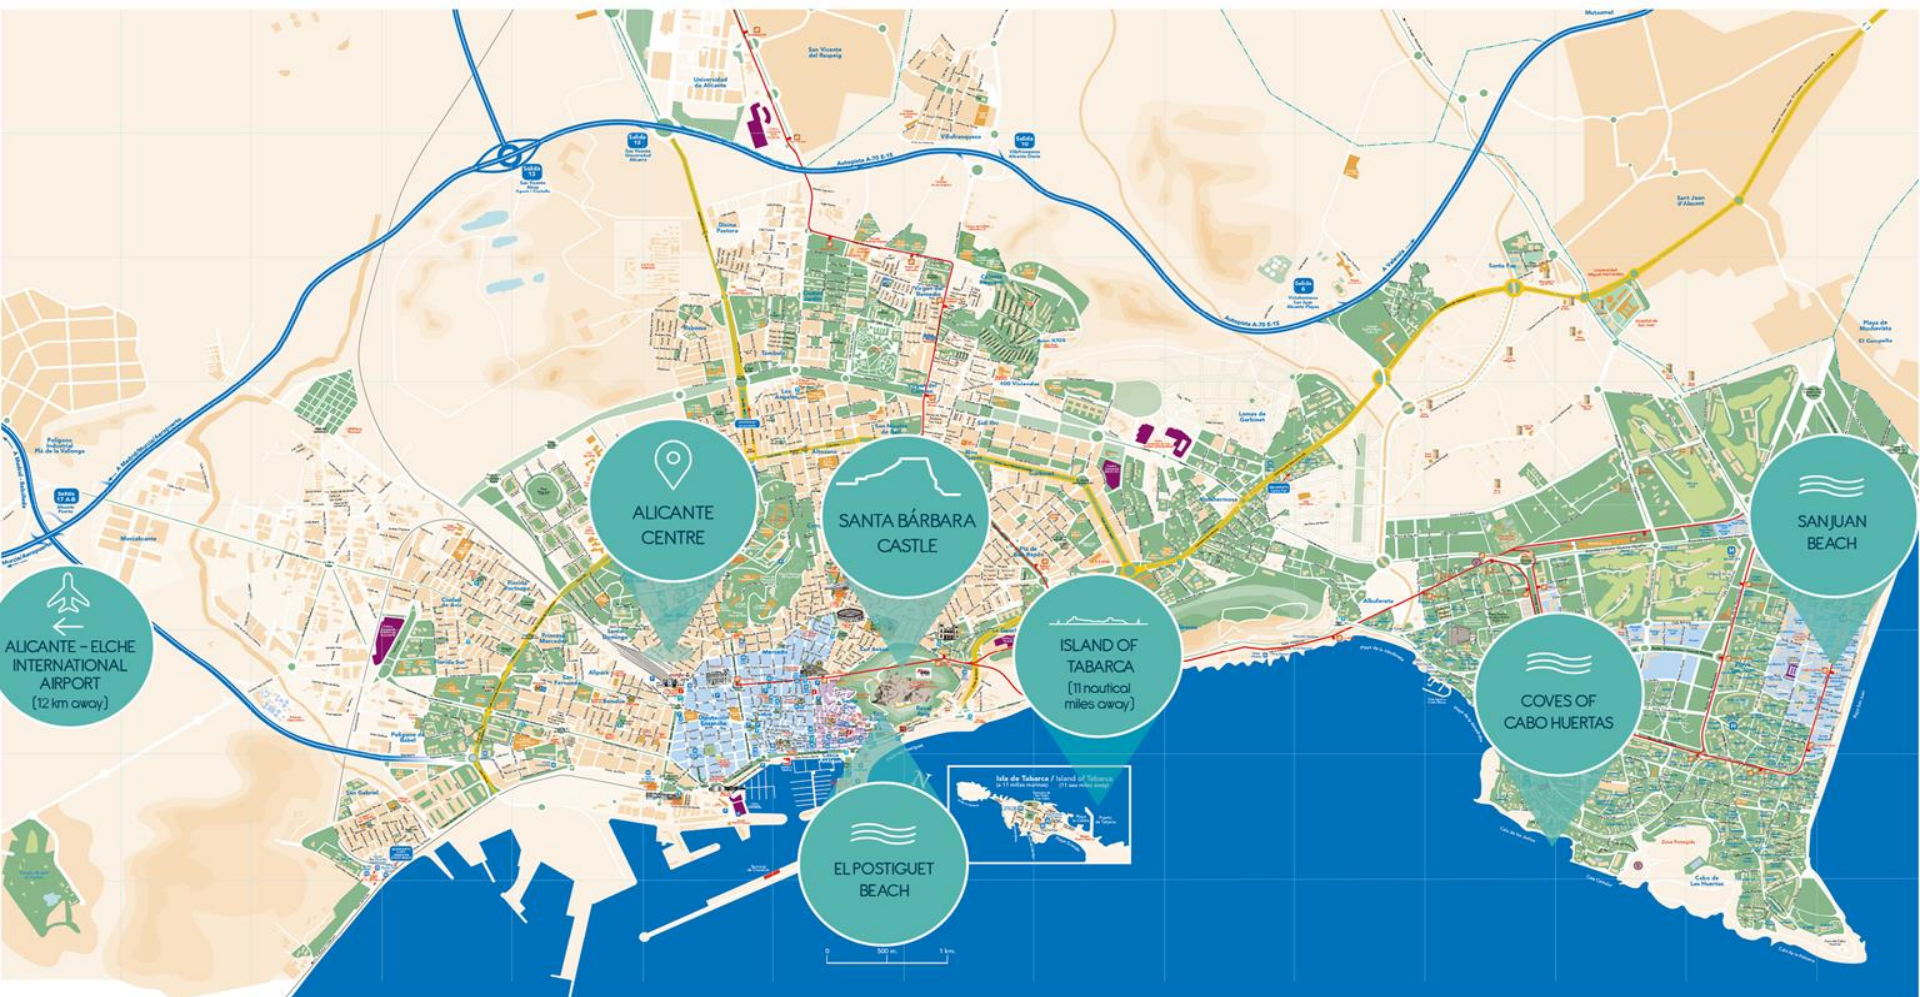

TRANSPORT

The high-speed train network (AVE) enables access to the city centre from many parts of Spain. You can travel from Madrid in around 2 hours, Barcelona in 4,5 hours and Valencia in about 90 minutes. Alicante enjoys an extensive road network as well.

Getting around the city and its metropolitan area is easy and comfortable, thanks to the network of urban and interurban buses, as well as the tram. The tram connects the city centre with several destinations along the north coast of Alicante-Costa Blanca.

The port of Alicante offers commercial, transport and recreational services. Every year the port of Alicante welcomes an increasing number of cruise passengers to the city and the Costa Blanca.

Opportunities for Remote Workers and Digital Nomads

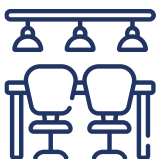

REMOTE WORKING IN ALICANTE & DIGITAL NOMADS

Remote working has become a booming option that provides great advantages for both companies and the workers themselves. The region of Valencia is one of the Spanish areas with the highest number of remote workers, and the city of Alicante is a clear example of a perfect place for remote working, workation and flexibusiness, where the general advantages of living whilst working remotely are concentrated.

The existing fibre optics and 5G connectivity network in the city makes Alicante a very well-connected destination, which is an essential element and a guarantee for remote workers.

COWORKING AND COLIVING SPACES IN ALICANTE

In Alicante there is an important ecosystem based on technological transformation and the digital economy, led by the Distrito Digital and Alicante Futura projects, launched by the Generalitat Valenciana and Alicante City Council respectively.

In the most strategic areas of the city you will find a wide variety of coworking and coliving spaces adapted to the needs of remote workers. Companies, freelancers, small businesses..., all have a place in these spaces which provide flexible plans for the development of professional projects independently at the same time as promoting collaborative work.

ALICANTE, A COSMOPOLITAN CITY DESIGNED FOR FAMILY LIFE

It is undoubtedly a comfortable and safe destination, where we also find first class public and private health.

The educational offer in Alicante ranges from public schools to private and state schools, with the possibility of bilingual education in several languages, and a wide range of university degrees, masters and bachelor's degrees at the University of Alicante (www.ua.es).

Its status as a medium-sized, accessible city with enviable climate and natural surroundings, advanced logistics, transport, education and healthcare services, cultural, festival and tourist attractions makes Alicante an ideal place for combining the development of professional and business projects with family life.
